IV. REVIEW OF LITERATURE

1. Luiz Ferotz & Cristina Ortiz (2006)

In a study conducted to understand the investment objectives of the investors and evaluate the performance of firms regarding management of funds have found that investors display more confidence for firms having proper fund management. Thus the stiff competition in the financial services sector calls for continuous innovation of products and services offered to the customer. Another popular vehicle for investment is Private Equity. Private Equity market has always been an avenue well sought by both the investors and firms. Investors look out for innovative products in private equity funds to diversify their investment risk and maximize their returns; while financial firms seek the private equities market to design and offer products that provide flexibility and customization to the customers which are considered as important factors for any investor’s purchase decision.

In his study entitled as “A study on avenue available for investment for investors’ atcaddalore town special reference to teaching professional at college level” Portrayed the behaviour of teaching professionals at college level in terms of planning their investment. He has taken salaried class in general and study also analysed of investment behaviour of teaching professionals, examined the popularity of different types of investment.

Psychology of Investments and Investor’s Preferences: Every Individual investor must follow Three Principles of investing: using along-term investing approach, follow in gathering strategy to maximize their turn on investment and proper allocation of ingestible fund. While applying these three principles, an individual investor has to confront his/her demographics lifestyle & investment psychology, whether the investor’s age or occupation or family income has a role of play in marketing choice of investment avenue? Is the investor choice affected by his over confidence reference group & framing of the available alternatives? The knowledge of all these aspects is imperative for all progressive investor, researchers, financial consultants, academicians, students & the market of the financial products.
